Tom: What kind of books are you reading in these days?

Bahar: I am reading a book about space travel.

Tom: Is it a good book?

Bahar: Fantastic! You should read it. I'll lend it to you.

Tom: Thank you. I am reading a book about inventors and discoverers. I admired their struggles and patience. I respect them a lot.

Bahar: Then, I can borrow the book and read it when I finish the one I am reading.

Tom: Sure.

1. Listen to the text and circle the correct option. Track 49

A few hundred years ago, life was more different and difficult than it is now. People with brilliant minds and creativity worked hard to invent or discover new things. By the help of them, the world changed and became a better place. For example, Alexandre Graham Bell found the telephone, and it led to the cell phone, fax machine, etc.

All these inventions improved the life. They helped people work more efficiently or keep them healthier like using x-rays. That allowed doctors to examine the human body and treat the diseases. We can give many more examples. Archimedes invented the water screw, Newton discovered the gravity of matter, John Logie Baird invented the television and so on. Thanks to all of them. They made our lives easier. They deserve our love and respect.
